

Countable or uncountable?

1. Look at the following rules. Do they apply to countable, uncountable, or both kinds of nouns? Ask your teacher and friends for help. Write C for countable, U for uncountable, and B for both.

- a) You can use the quantifiers a few, many, a lot of, several and some with them. ()
- b) You can use the quantifiers a little, much, a lot of and some with them. ()
- c) They have a singular and a plural form, and you can use numbers with them. ()
- d) They have only one form, and most of the time their form is singular. ()
- e) They can be counted with quantifiers, such as a piece of, a slice of, a carton of. ()
- f) You can use numbers with them. ()
- g) You can use indefinite articles a/an with them. ()

2. Classify the following words under Countable, uncountable, or both:

bread soda food glass sandwich lamb pea strawberry oysters salt sugar flour banana egg cheese information jam knowledge apple engine equipment machine machinery milk coffee money time scissors butter beans grapes

Countable nouns	Uncountable nouns	Both

3. Use one of the quantifiers below with the words you classified above:

a pair of	a cup of	a tablespoon of	a piece of	a slice of	a pinch of a loaf of	a bunch of	a carton of	a plateful of	a teaspoon of	a jar of

4. Now, give the list of ingredients needed to make your favorite recipe.
Use the quantifiers in Task 3 to show the amount you need.

5. Share the ingredients with your friends. Can they guess what the recipe is?
